September Senion of Congress.

The Republican Congressional Committee is in receipt of many letters, principally from the South, with reference to a session of Congress this month. The State Republican Committees and nearly all members of Congress from that accion favors it. From other quarters there is carness opposition, owing to the near approach of the Presidential election, and engagements of members of Congress to speak during the canwas, and because they dram it inexpedient. There has been no direct expression on the subject from Scautor Morgan to Representative Sciences, whose recommendation is to determine the question. The impression is that there will be no accasion in September.

Here is a scene described by a correspondent, writing from Wilmington, in the fall of 1864, to writing from Wilmington, in the fall of 1804, to the Philadelphia Impairer. He says:

"As you are aware, ten thousand of our prisoners in rebel hands were delivered over to us at Northeast, a station on the railroad leading from Wilmington to Goldstone. Of the promised ten thousand unfortunates, we have received at Northeast eight thousand six bundred and eighty four, of which sine hundred and interprison were commissioned officers. When the rebel official is charge of the unformate prisoners was asked why be did not deliver the full compliment of ten thousand, as promised, he assigned there reasons: First. That a number died at the prison after their hames were placed on the rolls for exclusing, and their persons deliver, ed to the officers in charge of the train. See out. That a number of the most vigorous jump of from the trains and took to the woods and swamps, disbelieving the statements of the reheals that they were on their way to be exchanged, thinking the statement but a pretext for conveying them from one rehel prison to another. Probably the poor fellows had been deceived with a similar story. Third That a number died on the trains on their way here. We cannot truce the precise origin of camp-mentiogs. The Apost's doubters addressed ssemblages of this character, and a comp ment ing was probably the scene of the Saviour's miracalous dispensation of "five loaves and two fishes," which satisfied the hunger of five thonsand people, and required seven biskets to carry away the remnants. In the present age camp-meetings are specially designed to subserve the practical convenience of people profession the suce religious farth, so that while residing in spusely settled districts, out off, as it were, from every 'means of grace, 'they could be periodically brought together for a special 'contpouring of the Holy Spirit," and be thus reassakened to a culm character. If you ask a Yassachusette Methodist, who his an income which will admit which camp-meeting he proposes to visit, he will lustantly say he is going to Martha's Vineyard, "it is so nice." Martha's Vineyard is not only a camp ground, but a sea side resurt, of constantly increasing popularity. The number of tents an silors have augmented from year to year. As the hour for preaching draws near, the Presiding Elder, Rev. Joseph Loslis, of Jamestown. mounts the restrum, and observes that the en closure is sacredly dedicated to religious wor ship, and that smoking will be strictly probible ed; that each visitor must act as though be wer not smoke in his own church, why should he expect to smoke in their church? He had seen horns at simp meetings before now that had on injurious tendency, and once had actually discovered a battle of whisky, but was quality to flud the owner. As the horn in question was not forth coming, Mr. Leslie continued to proclaim by word of mouth that preaching would soon commence. As the seats were thoroughly wet and probably producing at the rete of 150 barrels per derty, it was found necessary to turn them over, old after this work was performed, and several more eights extinguished by particular request, he congregation became scated and the exer ses of the afternoon commenced Rev. "How can a sinner know His sins on earth forgiven ?"

Mr. Biguell proceeded to deliver a very carnesi and forcible sermon upon the topic of salvation by faith. A report of the sermon, had we the requisite space for its publication, could scarcely do justice to the clear and effective manner in which the subject was treated. He called me dependence upon grace and merey; morality was of the gospel. The native deprayity of man, h.s. utter helpnessness, the necessity of repentance and conversion, the agency of the Holy Spirit in these exangelical exercises, were illustrated with olearm as and vigor that adapted them to it истика: сопътећенион.

The exercises concluded in the usual manner and the appointments were made for the conpreaching each day and evening. Whether meet igs of this character are really calculated to proote the cause of religiou and good morals is an open question. It is seldom that we witness the "great revivals" which were once their distinguishing feature. The preaching may be good uncetings sie to to have lost their traditional and peculiar "power" to convert souls. A subtle inwould be better, perhaps, if these interesting reishlomed characteristic of strong religious excitement but off clustly maint in good social in luences, employing their ablest preachers and their best singers, and being satisfied without at and realized, but seem now to be numbered with "the things that were"
